PICKED POCKETS IN CHURCH.

The Occupation of a Grandmotherly Old Lady of Eighty-Five.

When Jane Wherty attended early mass at St. James' Catholic church in New York city on a recent Sunday, a venerable and rather attractive woman, attired in a neat black dress and bonnet, followed her into the pew and sat down beside her. Mrs. Wherty noticed the elderly woman particularly because the latter seemed very devout. The old woman seemed inclined to be friendly. She smiled at Mrs. Wherty, and they shared the same hymnbooks. The white-haired old woman pressed closely against Mrs. Wherty several times during the service, but Mrs. Wherty thought nothing of this until afterward, when, as she was leaving the church, she missed her pocketbook. Then she called an usher.

MARY FITZGERALD.

er, who, when he saw the elderly woman, tapped her on the shoulder, said he knew her and demanded Mrs. Wherty's pocketbook.

The old woman protested that she knew nothing of the purse, but Policeman Dust, whom the usher summoned, found it where the old woman had sat. The usher explained that he recognized the suspected woman as Mary Fitzgerald, a notorious pickpocket, who had been arrested many times and whose picture has long adorned the rogues' gallery. The policeman took Mary to the Oak street station, and later she was arraigned in the Tombs police court and held in default of $1,000 bail.

"How are you, Miss Fitzgerald?" exclaimed one of the keepers, who recognized her. "So you are with us again! But it's none of your business if I've been here 150 times before," snapped Mary.

The elderly woman had given her age as 85 years, and it was truth, although she is so well preserved that she does not look more than 60. While her hair is silver white her face is plump and rosy, her frame vigorous and her eyes keen and restless. She does not have to wear spectacles.

Spectacles Cause.

John Hester, Calamba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklin's Arnica Salve on ed him entirely. Origin of the Diamond.

As usual upon disputed points, speculation has been busy about the origin of the diamond, and a large number of theories, all more or less probable, have been propounded to set the matter at rest. The two most reasonable explanations are perhaps the explanations put forward by M. Parrot and Baron Liebig. The former scientist, who has laboriously investigated the perplexing subject, is of the opinion that the diamond arises from the operation of violent volcanic heat on small particles of carbon contained in the rock or on a substance composed of a large proportion of carbon and a smaller quantity of hydrogen. By this theory, as he conceives, we are best able to account for the cracks and flaws so often noticed in the gem and the frequent occurrence of included particles of black carbonaceous matter. Baron Liebig, on the other hand, claims the credit of offering a simple explanation of the probable process which actually takes place in the formation of the diamond. His contention is that science can point to no process capable of accounting for the origin and production of diamonds, except the powers of decay. If we suppose decay to proceed in a liquid containing carbon and hydrogen, then a compound with still more carbon must be formed, and if the compound thus formed were itself to undergo further decay the final result, says this eminent authority, must be the separation of carbon in a crystalline form.—Gentleman's Magazine.

He Knew Its Worth.

Dr. M. J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. On the 26th of May, while in Des Moines, en route to Chicago, he was suddenly taken with an attack of diarrhoea. Having sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for the past seventeen years, and knowing its reliability, he procured a 25-cent bottle, two doses of which completely cured him. The excitement and change of water and diet incident to traveling often produce a diarrhoea. Every one should procure a bottle of this remedy before leaving home. For sale by all druggists.

Where Frank James' Nerve Failed Him.

Frank James, the surviving brother of Jesse James, whose reputation for nerve was second to no man's, fainted under so harmless a weapon as a vaccine quill. He arrived with his horses from Nashville, and before being admitted to the fair grounds was compelled to submit to vaccination because of the presence of smallpox in the stables. As soon as the quill had touched his arm he fainted away, and it was some time before he was revived.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family householders found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it if procurable. D. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy that he has used in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Parthen-D'Ashen Drug Co. Regular size 50c and $1.
